RURAL ONLINE INITIATIVE

Extension Education 4/10/19

We live in a rural community. It's a beautiful community that is quiet and quaint. One of the best things about living here is how small and tight knit it is. However, with such a small community, there are some downsides. One of those is the lack of jobs, especially jobs with career opportunities and higher wages. For that reason, there's a high percentage of members in our community commuting to other places to work. In fact, you can probably name a few people that live by you who do just that. On top of those who commute to work, there's also those who wish they could stay in Juab County and raise their families here, but due to their chosen profession, they must move or feel they must move to another location for more opportunities. Like many counties in Utah, our rural community faces the dilemma of finding a way to expand and bring bigger job opportunities to the county, while still maintaining the small-town feel. Luckily for us, a solution was found in something called the Rural Online Initiative.

In the 2018 legislative session a bill was passed supporting the Rural Online Initiative. This initiative was created so that members who lived in rural communities could receive training, mentoring, and coaching to learn skills enabling them to work remotely. They do this by attending an online course entitled "Master Remote Professional Certification Course". This course is a month-long course, providing a certification at the end, which allows those looking to work remotely to earn specific skills needed for remote work. The course is usually $99, but for those who live in Juab County, the course is free. You can register for this course online. The website is <https://remoteworkcertificate.com/>.

The skills learned in this course are skills like how to communicate effectively with supervisors while at a distance, how to build relationships with coworkers whom you may never meet in person, how to utilize technology to communicate effectively, how to use the skills you already have or build skills in computer literacy to be effective as a remote worker, and more. These skills are geared to be able to work effectively remotely and can be applied to different professions across the various fields. For example, a stay at home mom who may have skills in graphic design and want to begin freelance work to bring in extra income for her family, may decide that this course will be helpful for her so that she can learn to effectively communicate and build her relationships. An entrepreneur building an online business may want to take this course to build their skills so that they can better build their online business and use the skills they learn as they work in their business. Another student of the course may be a contracted worker with a company who is able to have employees perform their work remotely but needs employees who are able to communicate effectively and work with others from a remote location.

Whatever the situation and goal of the remote worker may be, the goal of the Master Remote Professional Certification Course is to provide the training to help meet those goals and provide them with enough confidence and a skill-set to be able to enter the remote workforce ready to take on that position. The Rural Online Initiative has providing education in many rural counties for the past year and we are now bringing it to Juab County. Stay tuned for a town hall meeting hosted by the Rural Online Initiative faculty and staff. This town hall meeting is meant to answer questions, provide instruction and allow for signups on the spot. This opportunity will be a great asset to many in the county who may want to bring more income to the household by providing either an extra income or a new career opportunity. To find out more information you can contact the extension office or visit the Rural Online Initiative website at <https://remoteworkcertificate.com/about>. Juab County is a great place to live and through the Rural Online Initiative can be a great place to work remotely as well.

BUILDING FINANCIAL SECURITY WHILE SINGLE

May 22, 2019

Where are all the single people at? As a single person, budgeting, money and finances are approached in a way that is different than our friends and family members with partners. According to research done by Ameritrade, less than one third of single people feel secure in their finances. That leaves the question to be answered, how do you build financial security, without having to wait for a partner. As a single person, there's a possibility that there's a question mark tied to your financial identity because you don't know what your family situation will be in the future. That makes it easy to spend a lot and not have a savings plan or any financial goals in mind, because eventually the hope is that someone else will come along and you'll work on your finances together. I myself, am single, and as such, can relate to wanting to wait for another person, resolving that question mark, before setting goals. In fact, for a long time, that's how I spent my money. The change came when I realized that there is a lot I can learn from others and how they use their financial resources. There's a lot that can be learned from the great financial gurus of our time, from family members, from colleagues, friends, and neighbors. Below are four steps that will help you to be able to build financial security as a single person.

Step 1—Evaluate where you are now. Just like anyone following a road map or trying to get to a destination, you can't get there if you don't know where you are currently. This is especially important as a single person, because you are the only one in control of your finances, so you are the one who gets to know what to decide where you are and where to go from there.

Step 2—Envision where you want to be financially. Even if you envision yourself with a partner in five or ten years, you can still envision where you'd like yourself to be financially with that partner, and if your current spending habits don't match up with those goals, now is the best time to change that!

Step 3—Set realistic goals. Jon Acuff, an expert on setting and accomplishing goals, talks about how when we set goals, we often set unrealistic goals that are greater than what we can actually accomplish. His suggested solution to that is to cut the goal in half. So, if your goal is to save a certain amount in six months, either cut the desired money amount in half, or lengthen the time you plan on saving. This makes the goal more realistic and easier to accomplish.

Step 4—Think long-term but be flexible. Life happens and will continue to happen. Your goals may change, your life situation may change.

Keep that in mind as you move forward. Being single doesn't mean you have to be insecure about your finances. You can take control of your finances today. You can depend on yourself and you can accomplish your goals. The best thing any single person can do is find a community and learn from others to help you create those financial goals.

OBITUARIES

Justin Douglas Wall

September 10, 1979 ~ May 18, 2019 (age 39)

Our “little guy” Justin Douglas Wall (age 39) aspired on March 15, 2019. He made a slow but successful recovery before passing on May 18, 2019.

Justin was born September 10, 1979 to Douglas and Jeannie Wall. He attended Oakridge School until age 22. While there, he was nominated and honored to be a torchbearer for the 2002 Winter Olympics. After graduation he went on to attend Adult Day Service Programs at Danville, Rise, and most recently his favorite, Turn in Springville. Justin was a real prankster and made friends easily anywhere he went.

During the summer Justin was found cheering for his Uncle Dick and cousin Brian at our local Stock Car Raceways, camping on the west desert where he and his mom would drive to see the wild horses while dad went hunting, or at Fish Lake where he always out-fished everyone by catching the first, the biggest, the smallest, most, and last fish while out on Fred and Leslie’s pontoon boat.

Justin loved cheeseburgers, enjoyed his NASCAR and NASA TV channels, football (especially the Denver Broncos), betting everyone on his Super Bowl board, going to our city carnival and parade, but most of all his date nights with Megan for his massages.

Doug and Jeannie would like to thank their family and friends for their caring support, medical staff and doctor’s at Utah Valley Hospital, Intermountain Home Health, everyone at Justin’s school, Day and Supported Living Programs, and Megan for making his days fun and providing the care he needed. For us as parents, he truly did make our job easy with his amazing personality, chuckling laugh, and adorable smile. We will be lost without him.

A Celebration of Life will be held from 6:00-8:00 p.m. Tuesday May 28, 2019 at Brown Family Mortuary 66 S 300 E Santaquin. Please join us in sharing your memories of Justin beginning at 7:00 p.m.

Graveside services to be held on a later date at the Eureka City Cemetery.
